Weak Kidneys Make Weak Bodies

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Pains of Norway People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill. No need to take the statement of Someone living far away as evidence.

Here's a case right in this locality. Mrs. George Thayer, Pleasant St., South Paris, Me., says: "I first used Doan's Kidney Pills a short time ago and I can say that they helped me a great deal. My kidneys troubled me for quite a while and I was so favorably impressed with what I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box. I am well pleased with the results of their use and consequently have no hesitation in recommending them to other kidney sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cts. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and no other.

Dog Days. In summer "Dog days" is the term generally applied to those hot sticky days of July and August when the temperature is high with considerable humidity in the atmosphere. Few people can tell you on the moment when the query "When are dog days?" is asked the correct answer. Indeed there is no correct answer to be given save in a general way that "dog days" arrive with the heliacal rising of the dog star. Various dates, from July 3 to August 15 have been assigned for the first dog day and their duration from 30 to 40 days.

Pliny claims that they begin with the heliacal rising of Procyon, July 19 N. At this date has been generally accepted. But Pliny says also that the sun was then entering Leo, making dog days begin July 23. The term was of Babylonian origin.

The more generally accepted rule in America makes dog days begin July 3 and end August 11 inclusive.

This information may be found in the Century Dictionary, but the Maine Farmers' Almanac gives the beginning of "dog days" as July 23, and the ending Sept. 5.

Why the Horseshoe is for Luck. Do you know the German fable about the horseshoe?

In the olden times, in a little village of Germany, a blacksmith was hard at work. The sound of the anvil attracted the attention of the devil. He saw that the blacksmith was making horseshoes, and thought it would be a good idea to get his own hoofs shod. So the devil struck a bargain, and put up his foot.

The blacksmith saw with whom he was dealing and nailed a red-hot shoe on the devil's hoof. The devil then paid him and left; but the honest blacksmith threw the money in the fire. He knew it would bring him bad luck.

Meanwhile the devil had walked some distance and began to suffer the great torture from the shoe. The more he danced and kicked and swore, the worse the things hurt him. Finally, after he had gone through the most fearful agony, he tore them off and threw them away.

From that time forward, whenever he saw a horseshoe, he would run off, anxious to get out of the way.

The German peasantry all believe this story today, and one can scarcely find a doorstep or a barn that hasn't a horseshoe nailed up.

Why Do Boys and Girls Leave the Farm?

This is a very ancient question. It has been discussed ever since we can remember and no solution satisfactory to everybody has yet been offered. Nevertheless it is a rather simple proposition, if you ask the boys or girls themselves. They will tell you that it is because they can do better in the town and have more advantages. They know the country, all its disadvantages, its long hours, its drudgery, as they call it. They do not know the town. They are lured by its gregariousness, or in other words, by the opportunity it offers for mixing with their fellows, its life and movement, and the apparently easy time the successful men and women have. They know nothing of the disadvantages and hardships. Hence they take their chances, to be very often grievously and sorely disappointed, and realizing that they have made a mistake and a vital one, they only wish they were back in the country.

The real problem is: How are we to make life enjoyable and satisfactory for these young people on the farm? How are we to induce them to like the farm well enough not to be lured by the surface attractions of the city? Obviously, one of the first things to do is to interest them in the work of the farm. The drudgery that is complained of ceases to be drudgery when we can take a vital interest in it, when we study it, when we use mind as well as muscle in performing the work of the farm. All work in which there is no room for action of the mind is necessarily drudgery, while where the mind is actively employed in it, the work ceases to be drudgery.

The physician operating upon a patient has some very pleasant work before him, but it requires such careful study beforehand and such close attention at the time being, that the disagreeable features of it are entirely lost sight of. There is a vast amount of work done by precision men which is the very hardest and most wearing kind of drudgery. The feature that relieves it is that it requires close attention and keeps the mind fully occupied.

The great thing, therefore, needed to interest the boy and girl on the farm is to show them the great scope and room for the exercise of every faculty of mind as well as body. Digging ditches is very hard and disagreeable work; but if the man or boy who is digging ditches is at the same time studying the laws that govern in the movement of water in the soil, and anticipating the profits, he forgets about the drudgery. Hauling out manure is not pleasant work—at least, we did not think it such—but if the boy is given to understand how it operates and what it does to the land, the drudgery is relieved.

Every boy on the farm, and every girl likewise, should have something coming to them from this work on the farm, not in the far future after father is laid away, but now; something that can feel is his very own. If you want to keep your boy on the farm, in addition to teaching him about farming, give him an opportunity to make a little something for himself, something that he can spend as he pleases.

In talking with the boy, don't say "my" farm, but "our" farm; don't say "my house," but "our home." Let the boy feel that he is part and parcel of the farm life, an indispensable part and parcel, if you please. Interest him in it intellectually. Give him every opportunity to know something of this wonderful world of knowledge that is on every farm in the wide world, and you will have much less trouble in keeping the boy on the farm.

Let the girl realize that it is her home; that there is something in or about the home that she can do, of which she will receive the benefits of profits, and there will be fewer girls coming to town to throw the live away and, alas, too frequently to wreck and ruin their characters.

Once more, remember that one of the great inducements of the boy and girl to most boys, it won't do to let the "first nine" of a country go to town. They are needed on the farm. If the "first nine" goes, the "second nine" will want to follow, and the country will be sterilized by this loss of its best life and its best blood.

The keeping of the boys and girls on the farm depends very much on the attitude and the action of the parents. If you are always complaining about the drudgery of the farm, making the hours unnecessarily long, lamenting that you are farmers, regretting that you have not taken up some other business instead, and failing to magnify your own office, then do not complain if the boys and girls flee from the farm and abjure farm-life.

Simple Way to Decorate. Select one or more firm sweet potatoes with a goodly supply of eyes. Potatoes about four inches long and two thick are good sizes.

Put each in a jelly glass, thick end down, and cover two-thirds with clear water. Stand in sunny window. When they begin to root and sprout put into fancy glass or fern dish, bracing with clean, small stones and fill with water, always leaving one-third of potato out of water.

It is a surprisingly short time there will be a rich growth of leaves resembling the ivy. Once a week put the whole dish under the cold water faucet and let water run slowly; other times add water as needed and a sun bath occasionally.

For results and long endurance this is better than the ordinary fern dish with its attendant care, expense and failure. The potato, once started is a rapid grower, and can be out down or trained in any fancy shape. It will be a pleasure to any housekeeper that likes flowers or green on the table all the year. It is such a little care and no expense, and is at its best in winter, when flowers are scarce and high.

Orchids can be put in among the green as one has them, and lovely centerpiece can be arranged at very small cost.

Broiling can be done as well with a frying pan as with a gridiron and the juices are preserved; heat the empty pan very hot first, then put in the fish or meat to be broiled; cover over with a tin cover or plate if wished and turn the fish or meat often in the pan.

Grand Trunk Railway System.

Its Rail and Water Lines Will Total 15,489 Miles. In 1909 it Carried 19,233,485 Tons of Freight, and 13,916,147 Passengers.

Many people fail to appreciate the commanding position that the Grand Trunk Railway System, with headquarters in the city of Montreal, occupies among the great railway systems of the North American Continent. It is the Pioneer railway of Canada, and one of the earliest built and operated on this side of the Atlantic.

From a financial standpoint the Grand Trunk Railway System is the largest organization in Canada and one of the greatest in the British Empire, the total capitalization of the Grand Trunk and its subsidiary lines being $426,099,335. Including the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the total capital at Dec. 31, 1909, was the enormous sum of $534,180,795 for the entire Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific System of Railways.

The present total mileage of the Grand Trunk, including its subsidiary lines, is 5,400 miles, with a double track mileage of 1,035 which makes it not only the longest double track railway in Canada, but one of the longest continuous double track railways under one management in the world.

Including the mileage of the Grand Trunk Pacific Main Line now under construction and contemplated—3,640 miles, of which 3,044 miles are under contract, also 5,018 miles of branch lines—the total length of the entire System of Railways will eventually amount to 14,950 miles.

In addition to the real mileage of the Grand Trunk operates steamer lines on the Great Lakes, between Midland, Detroit Harbor and Milwaukee, Milwaukee and Chicago. It also owns and operates large car ferry steamers on Lake Ontario between Coburg and Charlotte, 60 miles, and on Lake Michigan between Milwaukee and Grand Haven, distance 80 miles, the total mileage of lake lines being 1,289 miles. Adding the lake line mileage to the rail mileage above, gives a grand total of 15,889 miles of rail and water lines.

With regard to the amount of business handled, the Grand Trunk is second in the forefront. During the year 1909, on the entire Grand Trunk System, the number of tons of freight handled amounted to 19,233,485 tons, while the number of passengers handled was 13,916,147. According to the official reports for 1909, the Grand Trunk takes rank among the ten largest Systems on the North American Continent, based on the business handled, freight, tonnage and passengers, while on its lines in Canada only, it handled 4,434,754 tons of freight and 1,167,000 passengers more than the railway ranking next as common carrier; also, according to the Government reports, it handled 25 per cent. of all the freight hauled and 35 per cent. of all the passengers carried by all the railways in Canada.

Bureau of Industrial and Labor Statistics.

"WANTED—10,000 girls to help around the house. Must be honest and willing to work. Good homes for those who suit."

Such a want advertisement expresses one of the needs of the people of Maine. Think of it! There are 10,000 homes in Maine in which there is a demand for a competent girl who is willing to work for good wages under congenial and healthful conditions. Maine is famous the world over for its hospitality, its home comforts and its home life. Girls are needed to maintain the standards of the days before the store, the office and the factory have crowded inroads on the supply of girl workers.

Maine wants 10,000 girls at once. She needs as many as 10,000 three years ago and conditions have not improved. The wages paid are equal to or better than those paid in stores and many of these. First class girls are offered from $3 to $6 a week and all reasonable privileges. A further advantage is that there are no long periods of non-employment. There is always a demand for her services.

The Bureau of Industrial and Labor Statistics asked for information on the subject in 1908. Circulars were sent to every one of the 521 cities, towns and plantations in Maine. Definite answers returned by 118, one of which was a large city. These 118 cities and towns reported conservative estimates, of the number of permanent positions available for girls willing to work, as 3,550. If that can be taken as an indication of the demand throughout the State, the other towns require at least 6,550 more.

Oh you Maine girls, cut out that disgusting distortion! That miserable monstrosity, that unworthy new hair-dress, that wrinkle—that ugly, unbecoming, mat-repelling turbanette! It is even worse than its great grandmother fad in hair dressing before the Civil War, the water-fall.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and saps the vitality; vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet, telling all about Swamp-Root, time to time, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., he gave and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Soldier's Monument Dedicated.

July 21 was a red letter day in the old town of Bridgton and hundreds of guests from many places witnessed the unveiling of the soldier's monument in Bridgton Center, near the Bridgton House, at the head of Main street, given by ex-Governor Henry B. Cleaves, of Portland, to his native town in the name of his brother, Nathan, former judge of probate of Cumberland county and surveyor of the port of Portland, who died in 1892, and of himself.

The soldiers' monument which was made by the Hallowell Granite Company is about 35 feet in height surmounted by the heroic bronze figure of a soldier, the whole representing the highest type of art, and cost over $6000.

The dedicatory oration delivered by General Thomas H. Hubbard, of New York, a notable Bar Harbor summer resident, the son of ex-Governor Hubbard of Maine, a native of Hallowell.

In General Hubbard's regiment, the 30th Maine, served over thirty Bridgton soldiers and therefore the event has added interest to the personality of the distinguished general.

Rosworth Post, G. A. R., of Portland, and the Cleaves Rifles, of Westbrook, the latter named in honor of ex-Governor Cleaves, attended the exercises and delegations from other posts. The exercises began at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Ex-Governor Cleaves has always had a warm spot in his heart for his native town, and his generous gift of this splendid monument of the living to the dead, is most highly appreciated not only by the younger generation but by the veterans of Bridgton which sent so many sons to the front in the dark days of the Civil war.

Quite an elaborate programme was prepared by the local committee and preparations made to entertain a very large crowd.

It was nearly 50 years ago, almost a century, when with other patriotic young men from Bridgton Henry Bradstreet Cleaves, then a youth of 21, tall and straight like a pine tree of his native town, energetic, burning with patriotic ardor and like hundreds of others, anxious to move at once to the front, shouldered his musket and marched from Bridgton to join Col. William Wirt Virgin's 23d infantry regiment.

That was in 1861 when the second call for troops had come from President Lincoln. For four years the young man from Bridgton remained at the front fighting for his country and then he came home to lay aside the sword he had won by his service and to return to his home in the quiet life of a citizen upon himself the duties of a citizen.

When Henry B. Cleaves and other young men from Bridgton went to the front the first time they formed a part of Company B of the 23d infantry. It is said in its history of Maine in the war that of all the regiments of Maine sent to the front not one excelled the 23d Maine in the intellectual, moral and physical superiority of its enlisted men.

These volunteers came from the hills of old Oxford county and the northern part of Cumberland. They had not only all of them received a good education for those days, they were rugged sons of well to do farmers and as many of them afterwards showed, they could fight when the time came for fighting.

The 23d regiment, in which Henry B. Cleaves enlisted as a private and won the chevrons of an orderly sergeant, saw no active service but it had as hard a time as any regiment which left the State. Hurled on to Washington, it passed ten strenuous and anxious months guarding the National capital, digging rifle pits, building fortifications, marching and countermarching, its men exposed to all kinds of weather, falling sick by the road side and in camp, many dying from diseases contracted by this kind of service.

Many of the rugged sons of old Oxford county, when they got home at the end of ten months service of this kind had enough of war but this was not true of many of them in the 23d regiment.

You are liable to an attack of some form of Bowel complaint and should provide yourself with the best known Remedy, Dr. S. P. Allen's Balsam of Wild Cherry. For Kimball, proprietor of The Noyes Drug Store.

Francis Swan and family have been occupying Mr. Newman's camp on the shore of Lovewell's pond.

Harry Resenden of Fryeburg, who has a position as cook, and Fred Pennell, Portland, has been spending a week with his parents.

Another reason for the enhanced cost of living is the execution of the pure food law. Solicitor McCobe of the U. S. Department of Agriculture says: "Formerly resort was had to adulterated and mislabeled food to reduce the price of alleged articles. Now people buy raspberry jam, for instance, and pay more for it but they get what they pay for. So it is with many other articles in common use."

A Rambling Letter.

From an Old Subscriber.

In the morning all at the table have brown bread and the quality is the finest I ever tasted, which is saying a great deal, for I was brought up on the ham and butter principle to fifteen years of age or more and enjoyed it best, especially in warm weather, and though living on a farm, where all know the most laborious work comes in the season from May to November, of my own accord, omitting meat entirely, and while others were complaining of the heat, I was as cool as I wished to be. In returning from school I would run until fine dew-drops (i. e. in size) would show on my hands. My clear rich blood unaccounted for them, or since, by either alcohol or tobacco.

I had to learn to eat the different kinds of meat, and the fat portions of what one of my sisters used to call "Them unclean beasts" was especially so to me, and a piece as high as an inch in diameter would be rejected and ejected, as quickly as could be done properly. I started on corned beef, the fat part of which is nearly as harmless as butter, and in fact closely resembles it in taste.

My father, having been a provision dealer in Boston twenty-seven years, knew a little something about meats, and corned what he used himself, although he bought of the butcher when he called weekly and had, when a young man sometimes drove a meat cart himself. But he preferred the peaceful pursuit of Agriculture, and on thirty-four acres we used to feed and keep six cows and a horse annually, except their grain which nearly all farmers now buy, although once in a while one knows that to do so directly, for instance, Merrill Brackett (my former neighbor), whom you probably know, who has a nice field of northern corn every year and husks it with his own hands by electric light in his barn floor.

On the winter of 1907-8 I boarded with him, as my wife was absent in Portland, for her health and he was waiting for snow, which however did not come until nearly February, but after that date the road to the depot was alive with teams carrying pulp wood from Otisfield; one man even drove one horse for his team but he was a monster, both for size and power.

I was once in the Andrews stable in your village when a fresh lot of horses came in and were standing loose in the open floor when one, feeling thirsty, matched across the room with no direction or leave from anyone, and quenched his thirst. His withers were nearly up to my eyes, and I am nearly six feet in height.

I once saw, in Worcester, a fine team of several horses, sent out to advertise the Boston Tea Co. and by buying a certain amount of tea (which cost pounds) one had a chance to guess on the weight of the team, and after making a tour of Uncle Samuel's country, were to be weighed by the city weigher of Boston, and the nearest guesser was to receive a little present, $500 in gold. I did not guess, for two reasons; I am not a horse man and beside, do not drink tea, but if anyone loves a horse-back ride better than I do, or can tell of anything more healthful, I wish he would speak out.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would burst out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved that worst of all, the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE MCKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman. St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. H. H. HOGG, 6722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

To Prevent Perspiration.

At this time of year many women suffer from excessive perspiration of the face, hands, armpits and feet. Whether the perspiration is local or general, the cause is always the same—poor blood circulation. For the betterment of the circulation a home treatment should be taken.

With the hands on the hips, bend the trunk forward, holding the head erect. Then arise to a standing position. This must be repeated many times to derive benefit.

Another exercise is a quick drawing up of the knee at right angles to the body, the limb extending downward. Replace the foot and raise the other limb in the same way. Repeat this exercise quickly. With a sponge apply cold water at the base of the head and allow the spine also to come under the cold water influence.

Dairy Schools.

Plans are being made by the Dairy Division of the Department of Agriculture and the Executive Committee of the Maine Dairyman's Association to hold all day dairy meetings in each county of the state during the month of October or early days of November. At this time lectures and demonstrations will be given by some of the leading dairymen of the state. It is planned to have exhibits of dairy products made at each of these meetings. While it will not be possible to offer any premiums yet preference will be awarded and judging will be carried on by dairy experts in an educational manner so that those present may derive the greatest amount of benefit from it. Arrangements for holding this meeting will be made by the Corresponding Secretary of the Dairyman's Association in each county—Oxford County, F. H. Morse of South Waterford.

Any farmer desiring to have this meeting held with them will please communicate at an early date with the Corresponding Secretary for their county.

The 6th annual celebration, in honor of St. Rocco, will be held at Canton August 18th. This celebration is held under the personal direction of Marco Lavorgna. St. Rocco is Mr. Lavorgna's patron saint, and he has a firm belief in his power to influence events. He attributes much of his success to the good influence of St. Rocco and holds this special festival in his honor each year.

The King Drag.

The modern world is so full of a number of intricate things that, by contrast the following description of what is apparently very simple device has interest for the general reader as well as for the farmer.

Since 1896 the King drag has been before the rural residents of the United States, and by its use hundreds of miles of good roads have been maintained at little or no cost to the granger states.

The use of the drag is little short of fabulous, and the skeptics, told of its effects are disbelieved by those who hear them for the first time, but a slight experience soon convinces the skeptical.

The drag is merely two heavy pieces of swarding attached together so as to form an oblique frame, which slants across the road when the horses are hitched up so as to draw the loose material to the center. These two swarding work wonders. They put a crown on the road. That drains it, it fills up ruts. As a result there are never any puddles. Puddles make holes, and with a proper crown and the resultant drainage there is an end to bad roads.

It is usual in the states where it has been used for the farmers to drag it in front of their own farms. The result is a splendid smooth, rutless, level road all the way to town.

Story of a Colt Won Court Case.

Hon. John P. Swasey, representative from Maine, argued a case in a way truly characteristic of his homely wit. He rose with ceremony and with deliberation said:

"A neighbor of mine was breaking a colt. He sent his boy into the field where he was to be broken, and when the colt came by was to jump out and say 'Boo!' Mounted on the fiery steed, the farmer drove down across the field and things worked to perfection. The boy said 'Boo!' in earnest. The colt reared, threw his rider tore the harness into bits and then trotted victoriously from the field.

"Now," Mr. Swasey went on, "that's like this case. The idea was fine, but it was too big a 'boo' for a little horse!"

Sheep and Swine Transported Free to Fairs.

Announcement has recently been made by the Maine Central Railroad that during the present year, sheep and swine will be transported to and from the several state fairs free of all expense. This is quite a radical change in the arrangement for transportation of stock to fairs.

For many years exhibitors of these two kinds of live stock have been obliged to pay charges one way, while horses and cattle have been carried both ways without expense. Exhibitors of sheep and swine will undoubtedly appreciate this courtesy extended to them on the part of the railroad, and the exhibits at the different fairs will naturally be increased on account of the change.

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

When she was ready to serve her lunch, she produced a pile of squares of pasteboard, and on each one she laid a white paper napkin; then a sandwich or two, a bit of the most delicious cold meat, a bit of cheese, each article nicely wrapped in its transparent, sanitary paraffine paper, and the party was soon served with a delicious lunch. No wonder that the public benefactor. And no wonder that the next time they were required to provide a luncheon for a trip they knew how to pack one much better than they ever did before.

I asked her afterwards, about the sandwiches. And I found that besides filling some with peanut butter, and some with cream cheese, and some with ordinary deviled ham, she had two or three other fillings new to me. One was made by taking a big cupful of boiled ham, six hard-boiled eggs, six olives and three gherkins, and putting the mixture through the grinder of the meat chopper, then moistening to taste with salad dressing. The combination was tempting. Sometimes she uses simply the stuffed olives, shopped fine with salad dressing; sometimes cream cheese and dates, mixed to taste, and if desired, mixed with a little walnut meat, ground very fine.

She says her meat chopper is her steady companion, in the kitchen, and is used for all sorts of things, whenever she wishes mixtures, or materials fit for spreading on bread. Occasionally, if by chance any rarebit has been left over, after serving this dish, she uses that for a filling in sandwiches; making them at once, wrapping each in the very useful paraffine paper and putting them in the ice box; they will keep nicely until luncheon the next day, or for the piazza breakfast the morning after.

Sometimes for a change she uses the butter tins or other crackers which come for luncheon, for the foundation of the sandwiches; butter tins with the olive and date filling are fine for afternoon teas; combined with the ham filling, the children especially like them for lunches.

She tells me that instead of candies and sweets, generally during the warm months, she makes a business of studying and preparing different sorts of sandwiches, and simple cracker combinations, and by the way they are prepared, keeps the children of her family interested in them. "Thus they are lurching on good bread and butter, made tasty by a dressing which I specially intend shall give them the right of combination, the excitement they require," and that she finds this more healthful, more satisfying and really easier, than to prepare so much of pastry foods. "In winter they have the cookie jar to run to for their betwixt-meal lunches, but in the summer, children, growing children, should have; but in summer it is a sandwich job."

On the Train.
I was on the train not long ago, and traveling for a long trip naturally observed my fellow passengers. There was one woman across the aisle from me, one of a party, whose methods caught my eye. She was a common place, middle-aged person, with no special force for entertaining, or for taking her part in the play of wit and fun that always amuses a traveling party.

But when the noon hour drew near, and the children began to feel hungry, and the older passengers to inquire how about luncheon, her part of the day's entertainment began. How many persons start off on an all day trip, by the way, with a handful of fruit, or a package of biscuits, depending upon the sale of candies, or lunches upon the train to supply their wants, sales which generally are absent, for that is usually the time that no train boy appears with a welcome basket.

Our commonplace woman was different, and when the noon hour drew near and the hungry people began to query what they might do next, the quiet lady reached down under the seat and drew out a big, square package, which no one had seen before and proceeded to discover the most tempting luncheon which I have ever seen on any train. Tempting because of the way things were managed principally.

She had a big box filled with sandwiches, neatly trimmed and shaped, was wrapped in paraffine paper. Indeed, every article in that big box had its separate wrapping, and the preparation of that lunch must have taken a long time. There were plenty of sandwiches; slices of cold meat, neat squares of cold, boiled salmon, hard-boiled eggs, shelled and doubly wrapped; cookies, of several kinds, cake, neat wedges of apple pie, which specially appealed to the men of the party; in fact all that one might desire, and enough for twice her party. She said afterwards, that she always carried an abundance, for there was sure to be some child or elderly person not properly provided for by their own party.

When she was ready to serve her lunch, she produced a pile of squares of pasteboard, and on each one she laid a white paper napkin; then a sandwich or two, a bit of the most delicious cold meat, a bit of cheese, each article nicely wrapped in its transparent, sanitary paraffine paper, and the party was soon served with a delicious lunch. The home of Frank Swett at West Bethel was burned about midnight, Wednesday night, July 13. The family was awakened by the cries of the baby, and found the house all aflame. They escaped by means of the windows and saved nothing. The house was insured for about $1,000 which will nearly cover the loss. But for the alarm given by the baby the family undoubtedly would have been burned to death. The cause of the fire is unknown and the only theory is that it caught about the chimney. The family consists of the father, mother and three children.

Why do we not learn to cook plain, wholesome food? We all do, as a rule, a lot of unnecessary work. We would be happier and have better health if we lived more plainly.

A Play Day
In the White Mountains. The New Hampshire Weekly Press Association invited Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Sanborn of the Norway Advertiser to attend their annual outing. This is not the first time that an invitation has been extended to them to spend a summer excursion and they knew that a good time was in store for them; so last Friday morning they packed a grip and started for Bretton Woods, in the heart of the White Mountains.

Mt. Pleasant House was the place that the New Hampshire Press Association had selected for their play day. At the dinner hour, about fifty of the members and their guests were ready and waiting to partake of the good things on the bill of fare, as served by this well known house.

The Anderson & Price hotels at Bretton Woods, H. H., are the Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Washington and the Bretton Arms. They also have hotels in New York City, at Otsego Lake, New York, and in Florida.

Bretton Woods, N. H., is an estate of ten thousand acres in the New Hampshire mountains and Mt. Washington hotel is the largest and finest of the mountain hotels. The Mt. Washington hotel was officially opened by Gov. Quimby at noon Saturday. Salutes were fired and as the flags went up to the music of The Star Spangled Banner, the large crowd of cheer after cheer. Besides Gov. Quimby's opening speech, Ex-Gov. Jordan, Ex-Gov. Floyd and others made short speeches. President Taft had been expected to be present, but was not able to be there.

In the morning before the opening exercises, Mr. Anderson had invited the Press Association to look over the house and he spent two hours or more with them and they saw not only the mountain views from the piazza, and looked over parts of the house, especially the guests—the swimming pool, the squash courts, the dining rooms, stock reports room, telephone and telephone service, general store, news stand, portrait studio, parlors, etc., but they were taken into the kitchen and laundry and saw the "working" department of the hotel. There are fire places in the public rooms and steam heat for the cooler mountain weather.

In the evening was the opening ball. This is one of the social events of the season. The ball room at Mt. Washington lights up well and shows to advantage the ladies' fine dresses. Grand orchestras furnish music in the music halls and ball rooms throughout the season.

The association party went on a carriage trip through Crawford Notch to the Willey House, a round trip of 13 miles. It took two six-horse teams and two four-horse teams to convey the party. The scenery along this route is grand. This road is known as the "Tenth New Hampshire Turnpike," but is commonly called the Portland Road. There are many interesting places to note along the route, among which is the site of Tom Crawford's Notch House at the gate of the Notch, the Pulpit and the Dismal Pool, the Flume and Silver Cascades, Elephant's Head, Bungle Cliff, Mt. Webster and the densely wooded slope of Mt. Willard. The Devil's Den can be seen in the upper right hand corner of Mt. Willard.

Some of the party were a little timid about meeting automobiles on this, in some places, narrow road and hilly route, so two of the party went ahead on horseback and told the automobile parties that the carriages were coming, so they could pick out good places to pass. The automobiles in this region are about as plentiful as in the summer months and the large new garage and automobile livery, 70x225 feet is filled to overflowing, in addition to the older accommodations.

The Press Association went by Mt. Washington Railway train to the summit of Mt. Washington, a distance of 11.3-10 miles. They rode in an observation car to the station at the foot of the mountain and then slowly climbed that high 6290 feet above sea level. The top is a desolate looking place, being covered with rocks upon rocks. They took their lunch in boxes from the Mt. Pleasant House and ate it on the highest point of the mountain. Here six engines kept from the famous spring on the top of the mountain. The return trip was as slow as the ascent, amid the grandest mountain scenery of New England.

From Bretton Woods a train leaves each day for the station at the base of Mt. Washington. Here six engines kept for mountain trains, one engine and one car constituting the whole train. No trip to the Mountains is complete without a trip to the clouds on Mt. Washington. The scenery is the most beautiful, one goes up thirteen inches to advance three feet. Parties have in mind the building of a new Summit hotel on the top of Mt. Washington to replace the one burned a few years since.

The Concord Monitor is surprised that even so "hot a bunch" as the New Hampshire Weekly Publishers' association should have been able to raise the temperature on the summit of Mt. Washington to 95 in the shade, Sunday. The lucky people who spend a portion of all their summer at these hotels are much of the time out of doors. The stables have fine carriage horses, saddle horses and trail ponies, accustomed to the mountain roads.

The golf course is equalled by a very few in the country and there is a bowling green, tennis court and base ball diamond. There are stables, walks and mountain climbs through every form of woodland beauty and mountain grandeur, other paths with imperceptible grades lead through the fragrant balsam groves to springs of purest water, or by winding routes to commanding view points.

Maps of Bretton Woods and vicinity and others of the mountain roads are of the greatest convenience to guests and tourists. The booklets and leaflets tell in a concise and readable way of the things one may need to know.

Twenty-six cows at the farm furnish milk for the guests, and in the dairying department is a separator and other dairying utensils. The piggery is another feature.

A resident physician and a chaplain may be found at the hotels.

Services are held at the Stickney chapel and the boy chorists, a group of training voices from some of the best city choirs is one of the features of the service.

Stickney chapel, the "Church of Transfiguration" is a beautiful stone edifice on the estate in the summer of 1906 as a memorial to the late Joseph Stickney, who began life on the railroad at a salary of $35 a month and who made Bretton Woods and its hotels possible, because he wanted to do something for his native state.
